

Introduction

Whether it's for your company website, your LinkedIn profile or a press release, it's crucial these days to have a photo that stands out and makes people take notice. Research suggests that strong profile photos are more likely to be noticed and low-quality photos leave a poor impression.

From one professional shoot you will take away a variety of images that will make you look great and will last you for several years.

Approach

The first thing many clients say is that they don't like having their photo taken. This is quite normal. I am pleased to say that I have 100% positive feedback and clients leave shoots feeling relaxed and happy with how the session has gone. This is because I take time over the shoot, making clients feel comfortable. I also share the photos with them as the shoot progresses so that they can see how great they look, which in turn builds confidence.

Styles & Locations

I try to offer as much flexibility as possible for clients. They can choose to be photographed in front of a backdrop (usually grey, white or black). Or the portrait can be in an office setting or outdoors. I have a portable studio so I can set up anywhere. I also regularly hire different locations if clients have specific requests. I am happy to travel to your home or your office. Alternatively, clients are always welcome to come to my home studio in the centre of Bury St Edmunds.

Fees

Fees depend on where the shoot takes place and also whether you would like one set-up or if you would like both backdrop and non-backdrop photos.
